K. U. DISCARDS LABOR PROGRAM

Compulsory Work Idea Found Not Successful; First Rift Appears Among Board of Curators

BOWMAN IS OPPOSED

CHAPTER V

In 1862 there was but one agricultural college in America. The State of Michigan established her agricultural college five years before the pas-sage of the Morrill act of 1862. Their college was still in the experim stage, working tentatively and cautiously for a secure basis on which to build. The experiment station at Geneva, New York, had also been in existence for some years, but it confined itself mainly to experimental work. To these two institutions the greater number of agricultural col-leges established under the Act of 1862, looked for instructors and for

One of the ideas which had taker deep root in American mind was that of manual labor constituted an important, if not the principal element in agricultural education, that every student enrolled should do daily labor alternately with work in the class room and in the laboratory and that Lane, Lexington, Ky.

As long as the system lasted it gave opportunity to energetic and industrious students who had little means at commend to earn a subsistence while promand to earn a subsistence while pro ecuting their studies. The charter of Kentucky University equired that two-thirds of the Board of Curators should be members of the Christian church. They were eager for the growth of the university as a means for the expansion and growth of the church. At the outset, Mr. John B. Bowman was given an enthusiastic support, in the exhuberance of their gratitude for his work, the Board of Curators voted him the privilege of residence at Ashland. This they could readily do inasmuch as his services for years in founding and endowing Kentucky University, in con-solidating it with Transylvania and in engrafting the Agricultural and Mechanical college upon the consoli-dation had been gratutiously given to the university. Transylvania had beonged to the State. A majority of its trustees were appointed by the State. Larger contributions had been made by the City of Lexington and by private citizens, in consideration of which they had representatives on its Board, but it was a State institu-tion. Mr. Bowman held that, although the composition of the Board of Cu-rators remained unchanged by the union of Transylvania and Kentucky University, the union required and implied that ecclesiastical interests should no longer be paramount but should be subordinated to public utility. The alliance of the Agricultural and Mechanical College with the con-solidated interest and the splendid liberality of Lexington and Fayette good will. Wihle his influence was still paramount, he endeavored to fill vacancies in the board by men of influence out-side of the church and who shared his views. Such men as the late Frank Hunt, James B. Breck and Benjamin Gratz, men who would give the institution distinction at home and repu-tation abroad. The height of church nfluence however, was against him. The non-sectarian members soon discovered that they were ill at ease with their associates, that while they were treated with courtesy, their absence would be more acceptable to the majority than their presence. As time went on the lines became more drawn, Mr. Bowman in loving, true confiden and the support of the majority, found that his ability to raise money among the membership of his church had and that an appeal to the general public under existing conditions, was futile. His intention had been to raise a million dollars with which to erect on his Ashland estate, the buildings necessary for the colleges of Arts and Science, Agriculture, Mechanic Arts, with museum, libraries, laboratories and other equipment whereby instruc-tion was effective. His intention was to use the buildings on the Transyl-

UNDERSTANDING THE UNIVERSITY

Many years ago some philosopher made his bid for eternal fame by opining that "to be great is to be misunderstood." Whether or not this sage had Tennyson's gift of dipping "in the future far as human eye could see" and saw a vision of the present University of Kentucky, is unknown. But certainly judged by the converse of his proposition the university is a great institution for it is unquestionably misunderstood.

Perhaps one of the most noteworthy examples of how citizens of Kentucky misjudge the university is given in the case of athletics. The question of college athletics is a troublesome one at best and it is made all the ore so here because it is not understood. Many Kentuckians paying taxes for the maintenance of an institution of higher learning to which they can send their own sons and daughters, or young people of the community, resent the idea of paying taxes to pay enormous salaries for coaches, to build magnificent basketball buildings and stadia. They do not understand that no part of their tax money has gone for these purposes here-

The University of Kentucky does have a beautiful basketball building (which, however, is also used for physical educational and assembly purposes) and a handso stadium. But this money instead of coming from the tax-payer comes from the support of alumni who remembering their own college days, want to assist the university in the sport field. It is these alumni who are raising the money with which to supply these buildings which aid so materially in enhancing the beauty of the campus. Likewise the coaching staff is paid from the gate receipts of athletic contests and student fees. This is but one example of a complaint which covers a large number of cases and which is surprisingly widespread throughout the state.

It is an especially regrettable fact that complaint or misinformation should arise in the case of a state institution which is dependent upon legislative appropriations bi-ennially for its support. For such a condition cannot fail to work harm to the university. Misunderstood, doubted, questioned, its progress is made doubly hard because of lack of financial support.

Here is where the task of the student begins. He should be qualified and always eager to defend his university against these unfair criticisms which spring from ignorance and misinformation. But before he can do this, he must be thoroughly informed on the subject. He should make it his business to know the facts about the university; to understand its history, its working plans, its ambitions, and its ideals. The university should be such a part of him that its problems becom his problems.

The task is no small one. As in the Dark Ages men fought long and hard before they conquered ignorance and superstition, here the fight will be long and hard before ignorance and misinformation concerning the university can be conquered. But the task has been set, the challenge has been given-what will the

HIGH SCHOOL TOURNAMENT

This week-end twenty-four high school teams are in Lexington battling for the boys' and girls' basketball championship of the state. Opening yesterday morning the tourney continues today and tomorrow, ending with the finals in the boys' section at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the men's gym.

For eight years the state high school basketball tournament has been an annual event at the university. During this period it has expanded tremendously in size, from a small affair in which but few schools competed to a huge conflict embodying district, region, and state tourneys and in which approximately three hundred quintets participate.

Keeping equal pace with the rapid strides made by the tournament in size is the advance in interest shown by students, players, and citizens in the annual conflict. Here at the university the high school tournament is one of the big affairs of the year and the rival boasts of students concerning the merits of their respective alma With a worn out trick.

mater's teams, furnish the theme for many a "session' about this time of the year.

Concerning the advantages of the tournament so much has already been said and written that further comment would be mere repetition. Its merits in increasing interest in athletics, in promoting clean sportsmanship, and in developing a spirit of friendship and understanding among the high school students of the various sections of the state cannot be over-stressed

But the tournament should serve a further purpo than this. It should give the visiting players and other high school students who accompany them something of an insight into the purposes of an university. It should impress them with the importance of acquiring a higher education and inspire them to strive to attain it. In short it should make them want to and resolve to go to col-

The Kernel, the university, and the student body join in extending to our guests for this week-end a most hearty welcome and in wishing them a most enjoyable few days in Lexington. University students want the high school students to feel free to call upon them for any information concerning the school, or to ask for any help they may desire.

RELIGIOUS DISCUSSION

IN DEFENSE OF YOUTH By Rev. J. M. Rowland, Editor Rich mond Advocate

Last fall I made a speech at an Annual Conference that stuck in the lesh of the newspapers from Texas to Detroit. Few poor little preachers as any preacher of average stand-ever get as much space for what they ing in the last few years. I have say at a conference or elsewhere. This is not because of any brilliant thought centers and in almost all the church plain, simple statement of a common-place truth. There was purely no effort at stage play or any bid for pub-case where one was losing his faith that the blame could not be placed on some older one who failed to use as from God the opportunity to lead that doubting soul to his God in the shad-I was invited to that conference to speak for and to the Epworth Leagues. I made a simple plea for youth and urged that instead of forever mocking our young people we warm up to them as sympathetic I have seen many cases where teach ers of faith and consecration had a fine oportunity to lead their students out of darkness into light. But instead of doing this some of them raised them. I paid my respects to two classes—those who knock youth and more question marks and sowed more seeds of doubt in these struggling

Those Who Knock Our Young People For many moons the land has been full of these harpers. To listen to them you would think all our young people have gone to the dogs and the going was terrible for the pups. It is the very worst age of the world and many cases are cited to prove it.

Much of this is true and I am not willing to witewash youth nor cover its disease with flowers. The land is well filled with many young people who give their critics all the propaganda they want. If you keep your eyes on this class the outlook is not hopeful. There is much nightly oze drinking, many college riots, and much barbarity carried on by youth. Girls are going wild with dancing, smoking, and immodest conduct. Boys are smoking and drink-ing themselves to death and piling up wreckage for the next generation. Girls are putting more paint on their faces than their fathers can afford to put on their barns. The legs of the college trousers are in adverse ratio to the breadth of college brains. They urn midnight oil in the study.

But this does not represent all of youth. Perhaps if we could properly survey the field we would find young people are about like they have al-ways been. Some of them are bad and some of them are good. Some of the boys are fools like their dad-dies were before them and some of the girls take after their mothers. My old grandfather used to lament how fast the young folks were compared to the days when he was young and I am sure his grandfather in his day did the same. And then they did not have gas wagons and radios and flying machines. Many of the youths of your day and mine were wild and many are the derelicts you and I can ount along the way among the boys and girls we used to know. It is not certain the one you know now will have among them any more wrecks than the others did.

One sad fact that must come home o us is that if the children are going to the dogs it comes home in a terrible blow to the parents who are rearing homes from which these young people come, and on the older people who nake the environments in which they are living. It was my strictures on this point that got me on the first page. It may be as Sam Jones used to say if you throw a brick in the dark and hear a howl you may be sure you have hit a dog.

We are told there are more youth ful criminals now then ever before There may be more victims now but are ca not such. And it is well to seek the causes that placed these youths in the criminal class. I was in the peniten-tiary myself recently (but escaped pardoned me) and as I watched twelve-hundred men—the most of them under twenty-five, I asked the warden who had seen forty years of expert service dealing with such men w many of them were really criminals. There were few young criminals he said. These boys were victims of the crimes of some older ones who usually escaped. The real criminals often did not come to prison but the oung victims did.

Does Youth Defy the Faith? We are told there is much unbelied father or professor "a fire extinguisher to flaming youth." And Akkie being a coquette who syndicates her affections—well, the Kentucky theater was overjoyed to be the cause of adding one more triumph to this feminine Bluebeard who collects popularity honors and not measly husbands.

Anyway, I'm not as lucky as the other girls around here. Being Ak-kie's roommate, I'll get half the benefit of that silver Loving cup (I meant to capitalize "Loving." It's not an ignorant mistake. Love should always be capitalized). And think how esthetic it will make our room look and how useful it will be! We can put our pins and hair in it and Akkie can draw her endless numbers of frat pins from it—oh, I do wish this use-ful contest (just mere red tape) was over so we could use that cup!

But alas for poor Akkie! After writing all this and making all our plans, the contest has been called off owing to opposition of university administration. Probably because they knew there wouldn't be any contest with Akkie running.

Harry North, director of the company, taking the part of Pa Bence again is the star of the play. His characterization of a retired, well-to-do "dollar-watchful" economist ever protesting against the extravagance of his family, kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter.

Dorothy Cleur as Ruth Bence, the eldest daughter, is the one about whom the plot revolves. Her family has set itself on marrying her to the millionaire Duke Merrill (Kenneth MacDonald). True, she does finally marry him but only after having first married a youthful but ambitious plumber-architect, Kempy James, (Russell McCoy) a little earlier the same evening. (For the benefit of moralists who might read this we want to say that she accomplishes this difficult feat with out either committing bigamy or killing her husband).

Russell McCoy's acting as the youthful architect who is working as a plumber, is of the highest calibre Virginia Goodwin as Ma Bence does some very creditable acting, as do the other members of the cast. Jane Foster as Ruth Bence, the younger sister, fits her part as if it were designed especially for her.

Next week the Lexington Players will present the new drama "The Only Road," which is reputed to be one of the most ambitious plays they have yet undertaken.

To prevent the loss of one bit of its freshness, Granger is first packed in a heavy-foil pouch... Then to be 100% on the safe-side, this is sealed 'AIR-TIGHT' in an extra outside-wrapper of glassine—keeping the tobacco 'factory-fresh' till you break the seal to load your pipe!

Our chemists say it is 'an almost perfect seal for tobacco condition'-protecting tobacco better than any container except the VACUUM tin. Pamphlets University of Kentucky as one of its seventy-two members, may be of interest to the student body.) crowded with misstatements and presenting an entirely distorted view of the purpose of military education and its effect upon youth have been circulated widely and undobutedly have

> "Fortunately the attempts to peruade Congress and State legislature to ursurp the functions of governing pards and faculties of State institutions have proved abortive, and the wholesome and beneficial effects of military instruction have become so widely known through many thous-ands who have expreienced them that efforts of opponents of military train-ing have failed of their misguided purpose. But in view of possible attacks upon one of the most valuable features of public higher education, this Association desires again to go on record in favor of maintaing R. O. T. C. units in all our institutions in full efficiency, including provisions for the consistenly increasing enrollment, to the end that the full comple-ment of reserve officers in all branches of the service may be at all times en-

"The National Defense Act now in force is the most statesmanlike and efficient measure ever enacted to guard the nation against war and to secure the safety of the republic case of unprovoked attack. The R. O. T. C., of which the units in State olleges and universities are the largest element, is an essential feature of that act. Without the continued supply of reserve officers which thes units furnish, economically and efficiently, and with no disturbance of civilian pursuits, the whole structure of national defense would fall to pieces. Those who opose required military education in our colleges are op-posing the least military method of eeping their nation from a state of

"On the basis of our experience with many thousands of students, we declare that it is not true that the R.O.T.C. in our colleges breeds mili-tarism or anything like it. It is ridiculous to assert, as some have done that America is being Prussianized. No facts in support of such charges have been cited, nor could they be collected on any campus in America. Such assertions show small faith in the good sense of American youth, or in the fundamental peace-loving tradition of the American people.

"On the other hand, we can testify, likewise on the basis of experience with out students, that military education as now conducted is a valuable element in colegiate education, espec ially in training in leadership. It is mere instruction in close order drill and in formations for purposes of parade, as is sometimes ignorantly imagined. These college youths are in training as officers, not as enlisted men, and from the first lesson they are led toward powers of command There are all too few oportunities in ordinary academic life to discipline youth in actual practice of leadership, and the R. O. T. C. provides an opportunity we will not willingly cancel. "Because of its great value as an conviction that it is our duty to do our part to keep our country safe because we do not wish to be responsible for possible calling of untrained citizens to military duty with th awful wastage of human life inevitably consequent therefrom, we re-af-firm our position in support of the National Defense Act, the maintnance of R. O. T. C. units on a required basis, and appropriations adequate fo their maintenance at the utmost pos sible efficiency, and we request the Executive Committee of this Associa tion to call to the attention of Congress our firm stand on this subject and the need of more officers and of larger funds for equipment of our R. O. T. C. units.

GOAT WEEK!

Green and Red Ties and Antics of Fraternity Pledges Furnish Comedy

And now we have the proverbia Goat Week on the University of Kentucky campus! This title, however, is not acknowledged as such by ye goats they know it, as we say in polite society, as the week of the habitation of the bad man.

Seniors gloat over the comedy furnished by the freshmen, juniors think it great fun to watch their antics, from the hardships of their first year but the freshmen,-they must be silent and obey.

Green and red ties done up in Bus ter Brown fashion, speechless boys dining with sorority girls at their houses, freshmen climbing poles, when actives merely whistle, squads of military dressed boys, marching down town blindfolded; these are only a few of the trying situations that confront

Every year brings something new in goating. This year eggs are the rage. Probably the prices on them have gone down and the grocers have gone in cahoots with the "frats." Be it as it may, the lowly goats may be seen at all times, carrying them to and from school. Every time one breaks, they must replace it with two

Evidently all the freshmen in one "frat" house have seen "Tell It To the Marines," because, when the goat driver called for volunteers to drive the commander's car, no one budged

Black marks are the penalty for dis-obeying rules in the houses, and even one against a goat means well, we'll leave it to you to fathom.

Isn't it funny how popular paddles have become? Paddles,—paddles,— paddles,—and such clever inscriptions on them. "Paddlin' Maddlin Home," "The Latest Broadway Hits," "Hits and Misses of 1927,"—these, as well as many others, are painted on the implements of warfare. It's funny how quickly they break, too. The lumber companies must be doing a "whaling" ousiness. About every two weeks the houses must be replenished with them

We have heard that one of the large vestern universities is about to aban don the idea, because of serious things that have ensued among the goats. Half of a freshman's experience will be lost, if they do.

And the sorority pledges haven't gotten off either. Some must wear ex-tremely strong perfume. Others are on silence, and must not have dates. Still others must meet their to-be sisters with, "I'm so glad to see you," their faces as straight as a stick.

And after all, it's great fun, if not carried to the extreme. The freshmen now aren't appreciating it, of course It is mere drudgery to them to eat with chop sticks and bark like dogs. Later on, even next year, they'll look back on the goating as one of the best ex-periences of their lives.

Some day, when we're old and decrepit, we'll say, "Now, when I was young, they used to have a goat week at school, and—" and so on!
